Betty Parr from Tulsa, Oklahoma and Patrice Coppersmith from Milwaukee, Wisconsin were in town on business when they wanted to express their sympathy for the families of the 156 victims lost in the Sunday August 16 plane crash.

Romulus firefighters worked together as a group, so said Dan

"It's just so sad," said one of the women who climbed a hill of the newly swept intersection of Middlebelt Road and I-94 to lay flowers in remembrance.

Crash survivor is named local citizen

Cecelia Cichan, 4 - the lone survivor of Northwest Flight 255 - was declared an "honorary daughter and citizen of the city of Romulus for ever more" during the Monday night city council meeting.

Cichan, of Tempe, Ariz., is currently listed in serious condition at the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor, following the plane crash which claimed 156 lives Aug. 16.

Choked with emotion, Mayor Pro Tem Mary Ann Banks read three resolutions during the meeting.

Banks recalled how "a terrible tragedy occurred moments after the plane left the runway.

Both of Cecilia's parents and older brother died in the crash.

"A child's cry was heard coming from the downed plane. Romulus firefighters and a doctor immediately pulled the child from underneath the arms of her mother. The lone survivor was found and rushed to the hospital. Cecilia Cichan of Tempe, Ariz., is that 'miracle child,' " the resolution stated.

Wreaths now drape the newly cleaned lawn of the crash site and the recently reopened Middlebelt Road.

"The site is heartrending," Banks said. "People are visiting the crash site and seeing with their own eyes what before they only imagined.'

Members of council express ed interest in joining forces with Wayne County and North west to erect a memorial marker at or near the crash scene.

Another resolution adopted at the meeting sent a message of sympathy to the families of crash victims.

"We express our heartfelt sympathy to the families of the victims. We mourn the tragedy that has befallen so many families and share in their heart ache. Their personal loss goes beyond imagination," the resolution said.

"This tragedy and heartache is forever etched in the memory of citizens of Romulus, home of Metro Airport.

Unsung heroes

Romulus firefighters receive praise

By BOB DENYS ANP Staff Writer

Romulus firemen have become the unsung heroes, of sorts, in the plane crash of Northwest Flight 255. At least some members of the department think so.

Several firefighters appeared before members of the Romulus City Council Monday night, in full uniform, to receive some of the first recognition for their efforts. Council members adopted a resolution commending the firefighters and all other local personnel who helped heal the wounds of tragedy in the event.

And while several area residents claim responsibility for pulling 4-year-old Cecelia Cichan – the only survivor in the crash which claimed 156 lives - three Romulus firefighters said this week that they deserve the recognition.

"It was a group effort and not survivor in the Northwest Flight 255 plane crash, from the wreckone individual. Together we pulled her out of the wreckage.

"A small arm dangled. We found a little girl. We unbuckled her seat belt and asked for scissors to cut off her clothes. I performed an initial patient survey and saw no visible injuries.

Three fireman were part of a group doing a job they were trained to do," said Romulus Fire Chief William Greenslait.

"What training doesn't prepare you for, experience is the teacher.'

"It was shortly after dusk, that Dan first heard moaning sounds as he started squirting water on the wreckage," said Roy Brindamour, who with coworkers Dan Kish and John Thiede, eventually rescued

Cecelia.

"I shut the water down and called John over," said Kish. "We looked through the rubble and still couldn't find where the moans were coming from.'

"I went to three of four bodies," said Thiede. "We pulled some chairs away. But there was still a soft, but painful, cry. I checked to see if one lady was breathing. By this time, we were frustrated. We called Roy down.'

"A small arm dangled. We found a little girl. We unbuckled her seat belt and asked for scissors to cut off her clothes. I performed an initial patient survey and saw no visible injuries," said Brindamour.

Also at the scene lending assistance was Pam Davidson, a medical technician from Taylor Ambulance and a doctor who was on the scene. Cecelia was moved to a stretcher and into the ambulance where she was transported to Annapolis Hospital in Wayne, Brinda-

The three firefighters visited Cecilia last Thursday at the University of Michigan Hospit al in Ann Arbor. They described the scene a "touching" and presented the girl with a 2 1/2-foot Smokey the Bear doll with a Romulus Fire Department patch.

'God hopes she makes it,' Brindamour continued.

In all, 15 fire departments with 200 men responded to the scene. The Romulus department, with 43 men from each of four stations, arrived first They were on the scene within four minutes of the plane crash.

Each fire station and nearby departments fought the fire from different sides of the crash scene. While firemen from Taylor and Van Buren Township extinguished a fire at a nearby Avis rent-a-car building, which was hit by the plane. Romulus firefighters concentrated their efforts on exting-

Expansion, new ideas and new programs won't get lost in the recent shuffle of the Romulus Community Education Program as members of facility and administration prepare for the upcoming fall semester.

The reorganization includes Adult Education and the Enterprise High program which began last spring. Members of the Board of Education announced that these two programs would now fall under the umbrella name of Romulus Community Education. according to program director William Murphy.

Enrollment for both programs has already increased. and curriculum has expanded with greater variety, especially during daytime hours.

Administration and classroom space was also rearranged as movers and shakers of the program busily packed and unpacked earlier this week in preparation for their fall starting date, first day of school, Sept. 14.

More and more, we're trying to meet the needs of the community. Everyone is excenter would be open for the local children of school students and employees.

Enterprise High, a program for people who never finished high school (they don't like to be called 'dropouts'), moved from Romulus High School on Wayne Road to an entire floor of the old high school building on Olive Street," Murphy explamed.

The old high school, formerly South Junior High School, has housed the Beacon Day Treatment operation for several years. While the building retains secondary education instruction on one floor, the elementary grades have relocated to Mt. Pleasant School.

"Many of the Enterprise High students had negative teelings about their former high school building. The program is supposed to be as much an alternative as possible." he said, noting Romulus is the only school district in Wayne County with this progressive program that teaches students hands-on experience and "not more of the same.

Named for children who years ago wore their house key around their neck, a "Latch Key Program." will now be offered for parents of children in grades kindergarten through sixth grade. "Rather care." said Murphy noting the than stay home alone without parental supervision before

McAnally meets Chrysler in non-political forum

Crisis center seeks local volunteer counselors

By JANICE FRITZ ANP Staff Writer

Every hour of every day, there is an individual faced with a crisis which they find impossible to deal with. It could be a physical problem, such as not having food or shelter. Or it could be the psychological truama of dealing with the death of a loved one. Troubled individuals become depressed and sometimes,

Whatever the case may be, for every person in need of help, a volunteer is needed to lend a helping hand.

For this reason, the SOS Community Crisis Center, located at 114 North River Street in Ypsilanti, is currently looking for more volunteers to become crisis counselors and client advocates to staff its 24hour, walk-in services.

Established in 1970, the crisis center was originally affiliated with Eastern University University but it soon moved away from the campus to beome an independent agency when it became apparent that there was a greater need for crisis counseling than was originally anticipated.

While the crisis center is located in Ypsilanti, it serves all of Wayne county.

Pam Klinger, who is a VIS-TA Volunteer and Advocate for the crisis center (Volunteers in Service to America), explained the screening process all volunteer applicants complete.

"We put everyone who is interested in volunteering through the screening interview and it is set up as a group interview. The reason for this is because we want to see just how the applicants would react when encountering certain situations. There are no right or wrong answers when filling out the questionnaires. It's just a way of seeing which areas that people may work out best

"People should have an openness and an ability to communicate. They must also be adaptable and have a certain amount of maturity to be able to deal with all sorts of unique, often disturbing situations."

This year, the screening interviews are scheduled to begin on Sept.16-17, Sept 22-24 and Sept. 28-29, but plans for times of the interviews are not yet complete.

Once people are accepted after screening, they go through an extensive, 70-hour free training program which goes on throughout the months of October and November.

The training program helps volunteers to develop the skills necessary for their roles as crisis counselors. Skills which are cultivated during the program include listening and communication skills and problemsolving.

Laura Nichols, formerly of Belleville, said she started out as a volunteer crisis counselor at the center six years ago.

Probably the most important area covered would be the empathy skills seminar. It's so important for counselors to know how to listen. So many people think they are good listeners, but then they cross the fine line where they start to enter their own values into the situation. Sometimes all these people need is to get out their feelings to a person who will be non-subjective and not give out any opinions.'

Nichols said substance abuse, suicide intervention, grieving processes and even dealing with depression are all covered in the training program.

Sarah-Beth Weaver, training coordinator for the crisis center, said volunteers should meet some basic criteria.

'People should have an openness and an ability to communicate. They must also be adaptable and have a certain amount of maturity to be able to deal with all sorts of unique, often disturbing situations.

Weaver said volunteers must be at least 17 years of age and that the center often has people from various lifestyles.

"We have people whose backgrounds vary from home: makers to college students. This is beneficial because no two situations are alike, just as no two volunteers are alike.'

Nichols pointed out a reason that people might consider volunteer work for the crisis

"It's a personally gratifying job. Just to be able to help one person out is so rewarding that it's worth every effort you make.

The healthy life

Early training pays off for health service manager

By BOB DENYS ANP Staff Writer

From the shores of Lake Superior to the banks of the River who take advantage of our Rouge, Char Toivonen of Wayne learned early in life that maintaining good health is in Livonia. Wayne-Westland essential. Today, that philosophy is her career.

With bright eyes and a rosy complexion, Toivonen radiates a healthy glow that fits the coordinator of the Wellness program at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne. Her title is Health Services Manager for Occupational Medicine.

As she sat across a medical library table, she explained her job, upbringing and the fact she gave up drinking coffee two years ago.

For Toivonen, life at age 40 has never been better.

Born and raised by the shores of Lake Superior in a small Finnish town of Ontonagon in the Michigan upper peninsula where lumbering and mining were king, Toivonen experienced a healthy outdoor life.

Her family moved from up north and settled into their Palmer Road home during her teenage years. She and twin sister, Kathy, have been active in community affairs since. Her father retired after 40 vears in the tool and die industry.

Today, her sister serves on the Wayne-Westland School Board, and older brother Dennis, is a successful vicepresident for Chase Manhattan Bank in New York.

ASSOCIATED NEWSPAPERS: Is competition in the medical field really as fierce as the public is told?

TOIVONEN: Well, it's tough out there. The field has become so competitive and complex that if you want the business. you have to provide a unique way of delivering services. We are constantly evaluating the market place. As a result, Annapolis Hospital recently opened Metro Health Clinic in Romulus.

A total staff of 14 maintains the 24-hour facility. The first month we saw 40 patients and last month, we saw 65 patients. Eventually, we hope 15 patients a day will visit.

Not only is a wellness program part of our service, but pre-employment and annual physicals as well as emergency care are provided to local businesses. This all falls under the umbrella of Occupational

We offer a host of programs for stress management, eating right, losing weight and to stop smoking. Among the clients programs, are Ford Motor Company and General Motors Schools have discussed the introduction of some of these programs into their facilities. In short, we have our hands out to accommodate every piece of the market we can. When we're done, we're going to be top dog.

ANP: Could explain something about the Peoples Community Hospital Authority, of which Annapolis belongs?

TOIVONEN: PCHA was founded in the 1940s. It employs about 3,500 people in five hospitals and covers 800 square miles. Eleven thousand of those work at Annapolis, the second largest facility in the Authority. As the hospital in presently involved in reorganization, the administration has done an excellent job of informing employees. Moral has been very good. But there are concerns about the future. We really don't know what will ANP: What v. ... your background before you entered Occupational Health?

TOIVONEN: I worked eight vears in the planning department here at the hospital as a planning analyst. And before that, I developed and promoted strategies for Kerr Company, a major dental manufacturer in Romulus.

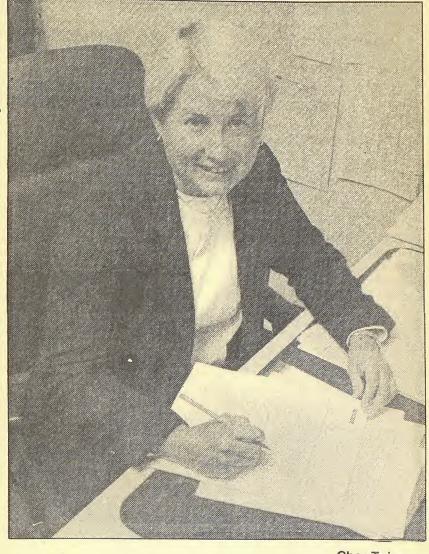

For the most part I grew up here in Wayne, and later graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a degree in Business Administration.

I volunteer with the Civitan Organization and am especially active with the handicapped and the Special Olympics. I like politics from the outside and naturally get involved with the campaigns of local candidates. It's important for me to be part of the community

Because I was born in the up-" per peninsula, I like the outdoors. I golf and water ski.

ANP: How do you like the city of Wayne?

TOIVONEN: I enjoy the community. Like Ontonagon where everybody knows your name, here, you walk down the street and people at least say hello. It's like a small town.

Local men relive frontier days

By JOAN MARY DYER Belleville City Editor

History is not always learned from a book or in a classroom. In fact, for several area residents the best history lessons they have ever received were gained in recreating the 18th century life of the old Northwest Territory.

The families of Leonard Darnell of Canton Township and John Hutcherson of Romulus were among the campers who set up a meticulously accurate. weekend at the Old French the muzzleloaders. Town Days celebration in Monroe.

The annual festival, which focuses on the period of time during which the first settlers arrived on the River Raisin, features a history that is similar to that of many communities founded along the waterways of Wayne County in the 1700s.

Campers, like the Darnells and Hutchersons, slept on straw beds, cooked their meals in cast iron pots over open fires and dressed in authentic costumes of the pre-Revolutionary War era.

Hutcherson admitted that he had never been a history buff until he joined the Ottawa Long Rifles. However, his interest in the weaponry of that era led him to research the daily lives rustic campground last of the early settlers who used

Minority program helps businessman to succeed

By TERRY JACOBY . ANP Staff Writer

One local company is emerging as a leader as a minority business in the international markets through the Ford Motor Co. Corporate Minority Development Program.

The program, which has been in existence since 1977, is intended to help minorities strive and obtain success in the competitive world economy.

Opportunity Fast Freight Inc., located on Michigan Avenue in Wayne, is one of several companies benefiting from the program. The local firm provides storage facilities for Ford automobiles.

John Rowser, owner of Fast Freight, is grateful for the assistance but believes success in business is still dependent on performance.

'We have to perform," said Rowser. "They aren't going to accept second-rate work just because we are part of the program. We have to perform up to their high qualities.'

Rowser said the program helps minority firms find contacts and buyers.

They have a history of the buyers, and they know how they operate," Rowser said. "With the type of competition we have for jobs, if were not ready, (other firms) will outdo us by 30 or 40 percent.

"You have to compete with these guys on the basis of performance," Rowser continued.

Dr. Ray Jensen, who is in charge of the program for Ford, is encouraged by the re-

"It has been very successful," said Jensen. "We do business with them in hope that they become long-term buyers for Ford.

'We work closely with them and help with their development and provide both financial and managerial support."

Jensen said that minority companies involved in the program are chosen on reputation and potential.

"We look at their track record to see if they can become long-term buyers for Ford," he said. "This is not a purchasing program, it's a development program.

Jensen said the program, which was restructured in 1984 to become more institutionalized, will continue to grow and expand to meet the Ford Motor Co. needs.

Economy eases on down stable road

Federal Reserve Board monetary policy seems to be following the policy of Paul Volcker. It may be some time before we see any reflection of Alan Greenspan's future policy.

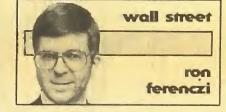

Greenspan has always stated, "If it ain't broke - don't fix it," and from his vantage point, "it ain't broke."

In the short term, everything does look rosy. The economy is on the plus side, consumers have adequate cash reserves, and these reserves are growing. Banks have more-thanadequate reserves, leading to little need for discount window

Business loan demand is down, keeping a cap on interest rates. The amount of excess unused manufacturing capacity will hold inflation in check. However, there is a fly in the ointment - corporate profits!

The recently expanded profits reports may be a one-time event, not the result of expanding markets. If profits fail to continue to expand, this will be negative for the markets. This week, some concern about interest rate increases will creep into the market, but will have little intermediate affect on bonds. Gold and silver will get a little buying attention.

For this week, the short-term traders will start to reduce their holdings as doubts of an ever increasing market price begins to surface. Selling pressure should be gradual and not cause serious market dis-Intermediate-term traders continue to have confidence that this rally will move higher. They will not be adding to positions, but will continue to hold present positions. Long-term traders may become a little more aggressive in closing positions and begin moving to the sidelines.

For this week, the number of stocks able to move to higher ground continue to decline. Broad-based support seems to be declining. The market may be in a pause phase, while trying to assess future direction of interest rates, the value of the dollar and inflation.

During this period, the market may develop a downward bias. The market strength of last week failed to create any broad-based enthusiasm or support for higher prices.

fensive strategies. Watch, during the next several weeks, for 'the smart money' to move into five-year T-bonds and take some of their profits in the stock market, sending prices

On the right track

The public has a right to know.

Thank you.

We're sending that "thank you" - on behalf of the public – to some political officials who have come to value the usefulness of thorough, up-front, fact-filled information.

Let it be clear, however, that our gratitude hardly can be extended to another select group of public officials who still have a tough lesson to learn in informing the public prop-

"The public has a right to know" - especially in newspaper usage – has become almost a cliche for avid readers. But it is not yet a phrase without merit, and it is not a phrase that we as a newspaper will lose sight of without an aggressive battle.

The public right to know is an essential one in maintaining the basis of freedom and self goverment on which this country is based. A case in point, a "thank you," follows...

Earlier this week, we set out for the Inkster police station to gather data and information regarding the shooting death of a local resident. We were dismayed when greeted at the desk by officers who would not cooperate with our requests for information and handed us only a handwritten. sketchy press release on which to base our story. We diligently tried to sell our case of trying to obtain all of the facts necessary in the shooting to the officers. We explained that the public had a right to know when the shooting occurred, why, where, how and what police officials are doing about it.

These police officials just didn't buy the 'public right to know'' plea and brushed us off without a second glance.

But Inkster Police Chief James Buckley quickly came to our rescue with an apology in one hand and fist full of facts about the incident in the other. To him, we offer our thanks and congratulations for having learned this important lesson in up-front, public disclosure of information. Maybe Buckley could give lessons to a few of his neighbors.

A second case in point

Several weeks ago we asked Wayne Mayor Patrick Norton and city administrators for a total dollar amount figure on how much Wayne taxpayers had spent defending two lawsuits between the city and a former adult bookstore in Wayne. None of the people we asked would produce an answer, with Norton saying the information had not yet been calculated for public release.

However, even when we called days later, the information - information we felt was invaluable for the local taxpayers' right to know still was not available for publication.

We finally did obtain the information - the city has spent more than $60,000 in the suit but only after one Wayne resident and candidate for public office filed a Freedom of Information Act request demanding the data. The FOIA. incidentally. is a state law that mandates that all records created and kept by public agencies in the executive branch of government be open to public inspection and copying, except those records which fall into one of nine exempted categories.

In addition, we recently asked Norton and city administrators for a status report on a minority hiring policy proposed in February and a proposed cat ordinance for the city first mentioned in May. We felt the citizens in the city of Wayne had a right to know whether the city hiring policies were being revamped and whether or not new local regulations would be tagged onto the household cats so many resi-

We're still awaiting a report, although we're not holding our breath.

The public right to know is an essential one. indeed, and is one worth fighting for ardently - in Inkster, Wayne, Westland, Canton, Belleville. Romulus and throughout this land. Although we mary times chuckle at what are sometimes outrageous displays of heated confrontations by the Canton Township Board of Trustees, we give thanks for a public body that so openly discusses and debates all matters of general concern.

We, likewise, give thanks to the Romulus city officials who so cherish the public right to know that they spend thousands of dollars each year publishing complete chronologies of all council meetings so that no aspect of these public meetings goes unnoticed.

And the list of thanks could go on and on to prove that some public officials have learned that the public does have a right to information and will stop nothing short of war to see that this information is disseminated in an expedient fashion.

Our point? Our moral?

The public right to know is not something we continually write about, fight about and wage costly legal battles to protect because we as a newspaper carry huge vendettas against politicians and the way government business is managed. The public right to know is not even a right that is ours as a newspaper.

The public right to know is your right, and it's a right you as a citizen must consistently preserve and protect. When you have questions regarding city and school government. we urge you to ask them and utilize your right

When you feel a cover-up in city government is brewing, we urge you to voice that concern to your local lawmakers, your newspaper and your neighbors. In the end, the informed citizens will be the victors.

We'll keep fighting on behalf of the public for this right to know. We will never back down in our struggle to report and gather all of the facts and information needed to present clear-cut, unbiased and fact-filled accounts of every news story.

And when we face a a roadblock along our path of informing you, we feel you, the public. have a right to know that information, as well.

In search of mediocrity

It occurred to me the other day that a great deal has been written about the "search for excellence." I have never seen anywhere, however, a book containing instructions in the fine art of forcing others to seek perfec-

It would seem that in the matter of motivating and managing people, the best you can do is attempt to communicate the reasons a quest for zero default should have some meaning in their lives.

It has always been difficult to demonstrate the patience for explaining the "why" of anything when the absolute necessity for action is so obvious and blatant to me, whatever the situation may be.

If the grass needs cutting at the office and no one is doing it, it seems obvious to me that someone, if not an entire legion, would step forward and say, "What happened to that guy who was cutting the lawn, and isn't it time that it be done again?'

Bad example, you might suggest, and furthermore it might be considered improper to raise such a question. An, besides, the next thing you know, someone might make it your job to cut the grass.

I guess that would apply as well to a long list of obvious matters that don't get attended to primarily because no one bothers to mention them to someone who can and will do something about it.

'Someone, forgot to order copy paper.' "The light is out in the ladies' room." "Someone forgot to turn the lights out last night and so they were left on all night." "Oh that's been broken a long time, I don't know how it happened. I've had to work two hours longer every day because it is broken. I didn't mention it to anyone because it's not my responsibility.

'Would it be unreasonable," I might then ask, "to expect that those matters that are an individual's clear and announced responsibility, be attended to in a timely and accurate fashion?" This, too, seems to be an unrealistic goal and expectation.

It sound as though I am picking on my office buddies, but, I am sorry to say, such mental lethargy extends to home, social and service groups, neighborhood, and other endeavors.

It must be that I am getting older and more crotchety than I have previously realized. For it seems of late that I have less and less tolerance for those who strive for mediocrity... and achieve it.

To me the quest for newfound knowledge, new experiences, and adventures is as natural to one's existence as inhaling and exhaling. It is my conviction that when we stop growing mentally, we begin to shrink. There isn't anything in between.

What I believe should motivate one to ask questions is a desire to learn in order to progress within a given environment or in order to prepare for survival in a more stringent environment at a time in the future.

If someone is a clerk in a store, it is best to learn everything possible so that perhaps when the oportunity presents itself or management or ownership, they will stand a chance of surviving.

When one works for a company, it is highly recommended that one attempt to learn as much as possible about their immediate superior's duties and responsibilities, so that when the opportunity arrives to move up, they are considered as a viable candidate for the promotion.

Is it because we believe that others succeed by dumb luck or by their looks, charm, and charisma? Therefore, there is no gain by working hard and learning. Rather, one should seek greater rewards by politicking, posturing and sceaming?

I am a great believer in people working smarter instead of harder. There is a marked difference between one who is perfectly willing to work hard, but has realized that there is

Resident blasts Wayne police

To the editor:

This letter is regarding a dear friend of my family, Mike Pitcher. He was known and loved by many people. He was buried on Aug. 8, 1987. Mike had been shot in the head on July 26, 1987, while driving his jeep on Michigan Avenue in the city of Wayne. The shooting caused the vehicle to go out of control and crash into the side of a building. Mike never regained consciousness and died on Aug. 5, 1987.

The Wayne Police Department chose not to release a statement regarding the above until Aug. 11, 1987. At that time they chose to slant the information released and emphasize a drunk driving accident. Almost as an afterthought it was added that he had also been shot. Mike and his passenger had been drinking, unfortunate, but true. The Wayne Police claimed astonishment that the autopsy on Mike revealed he had been shot. They claimed they had only gained this knowledge after Aug. 5th.

Doesn't it amaze anyone that the friends and family knew of the shooting almost immediately? That the doctor has been quoted as saying that he informed the police of this fact at the same time as the family? That the Wayne Police had the passenger in Mike's jeep into the station for questioning regarding the shooting a week BE-FORE Mike's death? Yet the police department still claims ignorance. Mr. Ray LeCornu was quoted as saying that the investigation would have been handled differently if they had known of the shooting. I find this statement amazing.

Rehashing the details of this tragedy is very painful; however, we would like to think that the Wayne Police Department is interested in more than just protecting themselves and the city of Wayne. I hope they are doing everything possible to capture the animal responsible for the murder of our friend.

viduals must have full and unimpeded access to government proceedings, including meetings, conferences and hearings where important policies are discussed and sometimes determined. Our state government has taken steps to assure full handicapper access to these public proceedings, and the Legislature has passed laws that expand the scope of services and activities available to the handicapped residents of our state.

Often, persons with physical handicaps or disabilities are prevented from full participation in public activities because the buildings or rooms used for the proceedings are not accessible to them. Persons using wheelchairs or other orthopedic aids might encounter impassable stairs or narrow doors and hallways. A lack of sign language interpreters or electronic amplification devices can limit the participation of hearing impaired individuals. Blind or vision impaired people lack full access to government proceedings if Braille or taped materials are not available.

In order to ensure that all Michigan residents can participate fully in the governmental process, a new Handicapper Accessibility Policy has been issued to all state department and agencies. Under the policy. all public activities sponsored primarily by state government must be accessible to everyone. including the visually or hearing impaired and physically handicapped. These activities include, but are not limited to. meetings, training sessions, workshops, conferences, departmental functions and public or judicial hearings.

The Handicapper Accessibility Policy requires state departments and agencies to conduct public business in facilities that are barrier-free, with handicapped-accessible restrooms and drinking fountains. In addition, the policy includes communication accessibility, covering sign language interpreters, telecommunication devices and taped or Brailled materials. Under the new policy, the state department or agency sponsoring the public activity must inform interested participants of the method they would follow to request these services.

The new state policy is in line with recent legislative action. new state laws allow handicapped condominium owners to make necessary modifications to their units and permit academic credit for high school students who acquire sign language skills. The increased participation of physically handicapped individuals made possible by the Handicapper Accessibility Policy should result in further legislative action of this

Yes, you can teach an old dog new tricks

Dog training is for everyone, old or young, male or female. it's fun and cost less than an hour of aerobic exercise. Both the person and dog benefit by the walking done in class, and the relationship building between the owner and dog is

Recently a 75-year-old woman brought in a dog for evaluation. She had seen the dog running loose and opened her car door to "save" it. The dog is at least 11/2 years old, and from the way it behaved, it was used to running free.

First, the woman was concerned about whether the dog could be trained at all, let alone trained not to run away. Whether the dog was outside to do his duty or in her car, once he spotted an open gate or open house or car door, off he ran.

Since January, when she first found the dog, it has run away twice. In that time she has taken the dog to the vet for a checkup and also had it neutered. Still, when given the opportunity, it would run away. The animal control officer would call the woman, and she would bail out her dog once again.

Could this dog be trained? Yes, it can be trained! What lifestyle or home environment the dog left in the first place puts a small burden on us because once a dog tastes freedom, it takes more patience on the new owner's part to break that habit. But it can be done. The requirement is that this dog must go through both on-leash and offleash obedience training. The dog must learn respect for the new owner first through proper leash control and next through the bond which is being created between him and his new owner.

Until that time, the woman will always have to keep an eye on her dog. Whenever she opens any door where the dog might escape. She'll need more patience than someone who doesn't own a traveler-type dog. But, like any bad habit, this one can be changed.

Because of the additional attention and companionship required between this woman and her dog, the bond built between the two of them will be tight as a drum.

So if you have a problem with your own dog and wonder if correction can be made to his behavior, be assured it can be straightened out. Give us a call.

People seem to be divided into those. who work for money and consider their vocation a job, as opposed to those who look upon their life's work as a career.

There are two groups of folks who also drive me to distraction. I'm referring to those who ask everybody about everything. These dear hearts like to accumulate knowledge for knowledge sake. They ask questions to a fault, not for purposes of voluteering, but more to achieve status as the best gossip in town. These sweeties are first rate at telling others "I told you it wouldn't work." In the end these people know nothing about everthing.

The other group tends and those who don't know anything about anything unless it is within arms reach. If you ask what time the person who sits next to them will be back, nornally comes to work, or if they are on vacation, they don't know.

They have succeeded in making a very simple job more often than not very complicated. They become the expert to end all experts on a subject that's about as deep as a radish grows. In the end these people know everything about nothing.

Committee strongly recommends waste disposal policy

An update on the solid waste management needs for the next five years recommended that a stronger policy is required for the 17 member communities of the Conference of Western Wayne.

The committee charged with reviewing the Solid Waste Management Act (Public Act 641), recommended to the CWW membership that a policy "outlining responsibilities of local communities, the county and the County Solid Waste Implementation Committee" be implemented. It suggested that the responsibilities include establishing a criteria for sites, a process for site approval and a distribution of costs.

Through Public Act 641, counties are required to update their respective solid waste management plans every five years. The CWW committee was also charged with reviewing the current Wayne County plan and making recommendations for revision

The committee named as its goals the need to establish incentives to industry to accept the recycled waste stream and to establish a criteria for incinerator site selection. They also said that incentives to local communities for expansion and location of new landfill sites should be established along with a commitment from a sited facility to unconditionally accept the garbage from that community.

The study, which will be presented to the county, also asked for the master plan of each community be reviewed prior to siting of proposed facilities. It suggested that the type of facilities – transfer station, landfill, incinerator recycling center – be established for each community and that a community of 150,000 population or less should have no more than one active facility without the consent of the host community.

Importing and exporting of the waste stream also needs to be reviewed, according to the report.

Copies of the subcommittee report were sent to members of the CWW, state and county officials and members of the Downriver Community Conference. CWW Executive Director Ann Bollin asked that comments on the report be forwarded to the CCW office, 13325 Farmington Road,

"Western Wayne County's Fastest Growing Ford Dealer'

By JOAN MARY DYER Belleville City Editor

New buildings, expensive furnishings and quality products may attract new customers to a business, but the efficient, cheerful person behind the counter is often responsible for the continued patronage.

A million-dollar public relations campaign, for example, can be easily sabotoged by surly clerks, indifferent salespersons or cranky counter crews. A robot-like ''have a nice day'' often puts the deep freeze on a customer rather than warming their hearts as the greeting was originally intended to do.

Among the all-too-common complaints that customers regis-

Clerks who gather in groups to gab and giggle, oblivious to the customers who stand and wait for service,

• Employees who "bad mouth" their supervisors or company in front of customers, leaving them wondering why they are patronizing a store when the clerk has just loudly proc-laimed, ''I never buy anything here.'

• Clerks who say "we don't have that in stock" rather than to check the shelves, stockroom or other branches of the store for the requested item.

Marlene Bruner, placement director at the William D. Ford Vocational/Technical center, said "attitude is at the top of the list" with all employers.

"Without exception, all of the employers I talk to are looking for employees with a good attitude and also enthusiasm, Bruner said. "They also check on attendance to determine whether the person will be punctual and dependable on the job.'

During the school term, each student takes part in an employability skills seminar to aid them in presenting an approporiate image to a prospective employer, Bruner said. In addition to attitude, enthusiasm and attendance, the seminar also emphasizes good personal grooming habits.

"As the old cliche goes, 'you only have one chance to make a first impression," Bruner said. "We work with students to help them do their best not only on the interview but also at the workplace.'

Pat Birbeck, manager of Bud's TV and a member of the Belleville Area Chamber of Commerce board of directors, said she has been a longtime promoter of good service as a tool for business growth and expansion.

"Customers will drive an extra distance or pay a few pennies more for good service," she said. "The customer who feels that he has been treated fairly and received good value will come back again and again. I tell my staff to be helpful and to listen to what the customer has to say and I emphasize friendliness a real attitude of friendliness, not just a silly smile. We take that extra step.

Pamela Edwards, group director at Kelley Services, said "a can-do attitude" is the primary attribute that employers are

"Employers want a person who is adaptable, willing to take on added responsibilties and also be able to fit in - a quality I call 'the chameleon factor.'" Edwards said. "So many things have changed in the workplace during the past 10 to 20 years that it is important for workers to be flexible and be ready to learn and adjust. For example, 20 years ago secretaries used manual typewriters while today they use word processors and other sophisticated office equipment.'

The incentive for being adaptable and flexible, according to Edwards, is a wider range of job opportunities through Kelly Services, the nations's second largest employer. Along with more job opportunites, there can be "steps up the ladder" which lead to higher pay, Edwards said.

counter in the men's fragrance and accessories department in Westland Mall and she said that in order to be a good sales consultant, there are a few qualities a person should pos-

"I think that product knowledge is one of the most important things that a person in sales needs to have. When customers ask a question about something that we have for sale, we have an obligation to know the answer. An 'I don't know,' or worse, making up an answer just won't do. If they genuinely don't know the answer about a product, they should at least take the time to ask someone else who may know.

Gorczyca added that personal contact, friendliness and patience complete the basis for a "good sales consultant"

"I know that when I go shopping, nothing annoys me more than a grouchy, impatient salesperson who seems like he or she couldn't care less about my personal needs. That's definitely important. The friendlier ones get me to come back again.

Besides waiting on the needs of customers, Gorczyca said she also has other duties during the day, including bookkeeping, stock maintenance, housekeeping in her department and arranging displays when there are promotions going on.

Gorczyca said the public often has a negative view of sales consultants.

"I think that salespeople sometimes are viewed as 'prima donnas' by the public because people think we just stand around with plastic smiles on our faces. But we do a lot of work and we sometimes have to take a lot of guff from irate customers without arguments." Gorczyca said.

'I know that customers don't like to be hounded by sales people who stand and look over their shoulders while they're trying to shop. That's one thing that Hudson's is trying to get away from. We like to tell them we're there to help and then stand back to let them continue their shopping in peace.

Gorczyca said the advantage of working in retail sales is that she is able to "meet all kinds of characters" in her line of work.

"If you're willing to listen, you can hear a lot of neat, personal stories that people like to tell," said Gorczyca.

The main drawback Gorczyca said she encounters is working the retail hours, which can sometimes be difficult for people with families. Gorczyca and husband, Eugene, are Livonia residents. They are the parents of six. and grandparents of six.

Having been in retail sales for 15 years. Gorczyca said she has weathered many a hectic holiday season and that it can be both the most difficult and the most enjoyable time of the "Christmastime is always so very busy. The pace is unbelievable. But it can also be a festive time. providing people are not in such a bad mood from too much shopping.

Despite the hectic pace. Gorczyca said something makes her continue to come back for more.

as the second youngest of five sisters, four of them in the banking substantially influenced her career decision. One is a mortgage consultant, one is a branch manager and another is a first vice-president. "They all started as tellers," she said. Collop, 25, grew up in Wayne where she and husband Thomas and their three-year-old son Tommy have made their home. She graduated from Nankin Mills High School.

Collop's two years experience as a teller were preceded by five years as manager for Taco Bell Restaurants, liked the work but not the 50-to through the entire day's trans-60-hour weeks.

That experience taught her accounting which she added to her math background, a favorite high school subject. Tellers receive three weeks training before they are trusted in a cage with their own cash

The most frequent and severe problems encountered by young tellers, Collop said, are early in their career and early in the morning.

'Whenever you find a mistake, it seems to occur in the another service industry. She morning so you have to go year on the possibility of such actions to find it. A big problem is reversing numbers. It's important to verify on the adding machine what the computer says. Some mistakes aren't bad, others well..." she said with a smile. Luckily, Collop admits most of her mistakes have been in days past.

Although she has never experienced a robbery or con artist of any sort, she said being located two doors from the Wayne Police Station may have something to do with that. Tellers are drilled four times a occurrences.

Bullet proof glass is not part of the decor at the Wayne branch on Sims. "I can't say I'm ready or comfortable knowing something like that could happen. Who could," she said. As she climbs the ladder of banking success, Collop admits knowing customer's financial situation is at time, surprising.

"People who were old classmates bank here. They have way more money than I ever expected. In fact, I've also noticed that many wealthy people live in Wayne," she noted.

Stop to smell the roses - the dried ones If you haven't stopped to ers and plants are beautifully work best for them. They are: your hand, giving some form to smell the roses lately, you may be in for a surprise, according to Jimmy Reeves, design cooridnator for Ethan Allen's plant and flower program.

Chances are, Reeves said, that the rose you stop to smell may well be artificial, so real in looks that "only the nose knows for sure.

In the last decade, sales of artificial plants and flowers have more than tripled, winning acceptance of homemakers and overcoming the negative image of a plastic geranium stuck in a white pot, Reeves said. A wide variety of single flowers, plants, arrangements, trees and hanging plants are entering the market from the Far East, Italy and Hawaii.

'The breakthrough for artificial plants came in the evolufor flowers, polyester for plants and trees and also in the technological developments resulting in better design and colors," Reeves said. "The key

Reeves, who travels throughout the world buying artificial plants and flowers for the 360 Ethan Allen Galleries, believes that artificial flowers should be considered as accessories for the home and not as an imitation for real flowers or a substitute for them.

Local cook shares the fruit of her labors with others

By BOB DENYS ANP Staff Writer

The counter tops of Dorothy Byrd's kitchen in Romulus are lined with canning jars and freezer bags stuffed with fruits and vegetables from the bountiful harvest of crops this

Cleaning, canning, cutting, blanching and boiling, whatever it takes to get the annual job of putting food up is what Byrd has on her mind this time of year.

Born and raised the youngest of four girls in the heart of Pittsburgh, she admits she never really cooked until after her marriage just before World War II.

"My job was to wash and cut vegetables and do the dishes. My older sisters did the cooking. I got stuck with the dirty work, the jobs nobody wanted. But it was okay. We had fun.

During the war, Byrd and her young family lived in Weirton, West Virginia where "you could stand with one foot in West Virginia and another in Pennsylvania and toss a rock in

She frequently visited her sister who lived in Romulus. After the war, she became homesick for Michigan. They moved and have lived here ever since.

Seven years ago, she married Melvin Byrd, a retired Veterans Hospital cook. He's a really great guy. What he thinks I want, that's what he wants. Melvin has two sons, she stated.

For 20 years. Byrd worked as a supply and equipment clerk in Mott Children's Hospital. "not far from the ward of the young plane crash survivor,

We were asked at a neighborhood meeting for ideas to help the community. I thought we should have a soup kitchen. We never pursued it, but they came back and gave us the go ahead. They had a complete kitchen. My husband had the funding and support from the Wayne Metro Community Services and private donations. Five volunteer cooks are assisted by several helpers. Zeffie Beanum works most closely with Byrd and is the cook supervisor.

"People are provided at least one good wholesome meal a day. They can eat as much as they want. We serve up to 100 meals a day. Most people walk in. My philosophy is to organize. Everything I do. I plan it out. 1-2-3," she said.

And like the squirrel who plans for the harsh winter. Byrd stocks her freezer and shelves with harvest goodies. not for herself, but for visitors to the Soup Kettle. So they too. can share the bounty of delicious fruits and vegetables.

Excuse me, Lee

Boy. is Lee Iacocca mad at

Now I know I tend to irritate a lot of people, but even I get intimidated when I know I've made the likes of ole Lido mad. What I did, was, well, I printed the recipe for his favorite cake last week--and I made a mistake in it. Actually, I didn't make the mistake, the stupid typesetting machine has a mind of its own, but try to tell that to Lee when he's got a bug in his spaghetti, so to speak.

Anyhow, for any of you adventurous souls who attempted to make the cake Iacocca claims he loves so dearly--it is three teaspoons of baking powder, not three teaspoons of flour that you are supposed to throw into this batter. It is a good cake. I've tried it, but as my co-worker Joan Dyer points out, "You wouldn't really think a man as busy as Lee would have time to bake, would you?

Just joking, Mr. Iacocca, sir. Anyhow, here's the whole recipe properly prescribed this time. Enjoy!

Historic church replica prepared for museum

A Belleville church, which was dedicated in 1869, is one of 11 historic area buildings being recreated by the Belleville Area Musuem Commission.

A scaled-down replica of the Denton Methodist Church is being constructed in the musuem, located in the former Quirk School in Van Buren

According to local historians, the property for the church was purchased on Feb. 6, 1869, by the First Methodist Church of Denton from Samuel and Maria Denton for $100. Denton was a small community just off Michigan Avenue which was also known as Denton Mills or Dentonville. The church was dedicated in December of the same year. Cost of the 250-seat building was approximately $3,000.

A cemetery was laid out behind the church on property owned by the Dentons. The first burial in the cemetery was said to be that of the Diana Smith, daughter of Ishmael and Honour Smith, who died in 1870. Early records reveal that the first wedding conducted in the church united David Lynn and Laura Gorham in 1875.

Services set for Lucille Hayden

Services for Lucille M. Hayden, 83, will be at 9:45 a.m. today in the Lents Funeral Home, 34567 Michigan Ave., Wayne. A mass will follow at 10 a.m. at St. Mary s Catholic Church.

Mrs. Hayden died Sunday night, follow ing a seven year battle with diabetes.

She was very popular and very well liked, said Mrs. Hayden's husband, Joseph.

A former employee of the old Stanton Airline Co., Mrs. Hayden worked 20 years as secretary at Monroe Elementary School. She met thousands of youngsters and outlasted four principals during her

Harry Howard, a former principal at Monroe and administrator for Wayne Westland, said Hayden was a loyal, hard working person. I met Lucille in 1956 and worked with her until 1962, Howard said. She had a hidden sense of humor that only the people who knew her saw quite readily. She was well liked by the kids and the parents.

She received 175 christmas cards in 1975, said Joseph Hayden. Can you be lieve that many people sent her cards, and I got two or three? She was very popular.

Hayden is survived by her husband and sister Clara Brown.

The church, which is now the Marantha Baptist Church, was designed in the classic or Greco-Roman phase of church building which featured pedimented window and door frames and an oculus window. Jeff Winsel, an Eastern Michigan University student, aided the BAM in selecting the appropriate building for the museum. According to Winsel, the buildings selected were "folk or vernacular" architecture rather that high style architectur. The primary function of the buildings was functional, he said, but "some show stylistic influences."

Winstel noted that four of the buildings selected were influenced by the Greek Revival style – Forbes' House, Bebe's General Store, West Sumpter School and the blacksmith shop. All of these buildings, he said, have a gable front road orientation, low pitched roof and a balanced front bay arrangement.

The dressmaker's shop, which was loosely based on Scott Colby's farmhouse, shows strong Gothic Revival influence, according to Winstel. It features include a cross gable, decorative vergeboard on the eaves and a one-story porch with quatrefoil ornamentation.

Pullman's Shop, the Arlington Hotel and the old Township Hall exhibit an Italianate style, Winstel said. Elements of the style found in the hotel and shop include overhanging eaves with cornices and bracketed window crowns. The Italianate elements in the Township Hall include arched second floor windows and a raised stone foundation, he ville Depot, according to Win- stel. The main element of this style was the decorative spinde work in the gable, he said.

> "The architectural styles that influenced the buildings represented in the BAM reflect regional as well as national architectural trends. The Greek Revival and Gothic Revival styles wer most popular int he northeastern states," according to Winstel. "The Italianate and Queen Anne influences, along with the simplification of line seen in the brickwork on the bank, indicate broader, national trends in architecture.

Winstel believes that the buildings represented in the musuem represent more than country architectural styles and types. Architecture tells a story about the society that creates it, he said. "The story may be about a proud new democracy or a society seeking a form of escape from the social problems of rapid industrialization. It is important to remember that part of the Belleville area story is told by the buildings from the past," Winstel said.

Literacy council pleads for help from local churches

By BOB DENYS ANP Staff Writer

Reading can be "fun-'damental, according to one national campaign, but only for those who know how to read, according to Carolyn Burns, a member of the Michigan Adult Literacy Initiative task force.

Burns, of Canton, said local churches are joining in a campaign to stamp out - or at least curb - illiteracy in the area. As a member of the Lutheran Church Women organization. Burns discovered an awareness, recognized a need and became involved with adults and illiteracy in 1974.

She later became the program coordinator for the Community Literacy Council, affiliated with the Plymouth-Canton Community Education program.

"No one wants to admit they can't read. Most of us take our ability to read for granted. Yet, thousands of people struggle with the simplist of words.'

Burns and many other local residents have taken to the streets with their message, proclaiming September as "Literacy Action Month."

Adult and community educators, library personnel, religious, business, labor and public officials have joined in the effort for three years. Their hope is to continue to focus attention on the problem, according to Burns.

"It's important that our message get out to the public. We encourage friends of people who can't read to help them. We can't put up posters, because they can't read them," Burns explained. "There's no one reason why people can't read. And often it's not their fault. No one is really to blame."

Burns said there are several reasons why people fail to read. 'Sometimes the family moved frequently when people were children. Maybe they dropped out of school to help support the family. There could be learning disabilities that went unrecognized years ago," she said.

Local illiteracy statistics are surprising, Burns noted.

"In Canton alone, from the 1980 Census, we see that 6 percent of all residents have less than an eighth-grade education. That's 2,900 people. Ten 5310; Barbara Potter, in percent didn't finish high school. Eight percent are fore- or Carolyn Burns, in Canton ign-born, and English is their Township, at 459-9639.

second language," Burns said. "The number of people eligible as illiterate is 21 percent. That's alarming!

In the month-long program, Sunday, Aug. 30 is "Literacy Sunday" and will kick off the campaign.

 Sept. 6 will mark a concentration of efforts on literacy in the workplace, particularly in the training and retraining of employees. • Sept. 1 begins "Give the Gift of Reading Week," when an effort to recognize and recruit volunteers for the programs is initiated.

• On Sept. 13, the focus is on students.

• On Sept. 20, participating students have been invited to visit the governor in Lansing.

• And Sept. 27 begins "Ask Your Library Week," where libraries will facilitate the development of literacy information sites and service to adults.

Anyone wishing information on the location of certain presentations can call: Salena Robinson in Inkster, at 722 Wayne-Westland, at 722-1662;

Tony LaRoche, advertising chairman of the St. Aloyisius Festival, stands next to the sign promoting what he hopes will be another great year of fun, food, and entertainment. The Labor Day weekend festival, Sept. 4 through 7th, will be conducted from 6 p.m. on Friday, from 4 p.m. to midnight on Saturday, noon to midnight on Sunday and noon to 9 p.m. on Monday. While Alvis Alan is the featured entertainment, other activities include Bingo, rides, Las Veagas games, food, beer and wine. A raffle boasts a prize of $7,000. ## Canton woman finds hobby in mineral collection

By SHERRY WOODARD ANP Staff Writer

For Joyce Hanschu of Canton Township, the hobby of mineral and gem collecting started on an Upper Peninsula beach nearly 25 years ago. She and her husband, Norm, were strolling on the beach, enjoying their vacation when they noticed a man collecting stones known as agates.

"You can make very beautiful jewelry out of them," Hanschu said. "If you find the valuable ones. They're found all over the world actually.

After observing the man on the beach along with a few other mineral and gem prospectors, Hanschu and her husband were invited by one of them to attend a meeting of the Midwest Mineralogical and Lapidary Society of Dearborn.

A quarter of a century later Hanschu has a basement full of collectible minerals.

About four to six times a year, she scoops up her collection to exhibit it at gem and mineral shows.

Norm Hanschu takes mineral collecting one step farther than displaying her treasures in a case, Hanschu said. "He now has a faceting machine,' she said.

That's a piece of machinery used to cut gems into shapes, the collector explained. Since her husband has just started the hobby, he practices on cheap materials like glass and quartz.

As for Hanschu, she is involved in tree making - the art of taking wire and gems and forming them into tree shapes.

"It's therapy for me," she said, "mental therapy," she added with a laugh.

The collecting though is "just a hobby." 'You can't wear a lot of jewelry with blue jeans," the mother of two adult sons said with a chuckle.

That does not mean that Hanschu cannot be found pressing her face against the glass of a jeweler's showcase from time to time.

She "definitely" looks, she admitted, especially if there are rings on display. But "it's much more meaningful to find (a gem) yourself" than to buy one in a store, she said.

Finding gems and minerals means getting down in the dirt, deep down, Hanschu said. In the metro Detroit area the best places to look are downriver near Monroe and in Canada near the city of Windsor.

Joyce Hanschu displays a few of her collected rocks and mineral specimens.

Canton Township does not seem to be a good spot for mining stones, she said. That may be because there have not been any deep excavations in the area. It usually takes deep digging up of the earth to uncover the hiding places of gems and minerals, she said.

Although her interest in the topic is keen, Hanschu, who does not work outside of her northeast Canton home, has never considered the possibility of becoming a geologist.

Primarily the thought of taking college chemistry courses deterred her, she admitted.

"I'm having too much fun to work that hard," she chuckled. Her collection is not what you would call valuable, Hanschu said, although it would be to another collector. And contrary to what people might

"I'd feel very uncomfortable wearing something that expensive," she said. Besides, she often dresses casually so "other than the rings...I don't wear a lot of jewelry.'

Japanese to clash with Westland national baseball champion

By TOM MOORADIAN ANP Staff Writer

Westland's national-title winning Mickey Mantle team will take on the best of a touring Japanese All-Star baseball team in a threegame series scheduled to be played under the lights at Ford Field in Livonia.

'It is an honor to play this team from Japan," said Jerry Pitcher who guided the Westland team to a 37-8 wonlost record and their second national title. "These kids have a lot of pride and accomplished what many believed was impossible by bringing the national championship back to Westland.'

Westland edged a national power, Norwalk (California) 4-3 to claim the national title.

The three-game series against the Japanese will be played Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The first two contests are scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Aug. 26-27 at the Livonia field, Farmington Road, between Lyndon and 5-Mile Road.

The third and final game will be played at 2 p.m. on the Westland John Glenn High School field.

The Japanese team is being sponsored by the United States Baseball Federation and Little Caesar's. The team has already played several games against clubs in the East.

Pitcher, who has coached amateur baseball for 17 years, said he knows little about the opposing team, 'except that you know they have to be good to be able to represent their country.

"It is an honor to play this team from Japan. These kids have a lot of pride and have accomplished what many believed was impossible.

Japan and the Japanese love baseball, and I expect they will be sending their best to play here.'

At a press conference last week, attended by Dennis

Fassett, director of Cable and Community Relations for the city of Westland; George Gillies, parks and recreation director, Sam Corrado, a member of the program and reception committee: Ivor James, president of the American Baseball Congress and president of the Little Caesar's Baseball League, and Pitcher, most of the details for the program were worked out.

The city will host the 40plus Japanese baseball delegation and the local ball club at a 9 a.m. Saturday breakfast at the Melvin

Bailey Recreation Complex, Multi-Purpose Room. The two competing teams are also invited to view the Detroit Tigers-Texas Rangers night game at Tiger Sta-

"There will be an exchange of gifts between the players," noted Corrado, 'and we are planning an interesting program for them.

One problem not resolved as yet is the status of some of Pitcher's players, who are members of high school football teams. The teams have practices and coaches are reluctant to release their players for the Japanese

"I am hoping that we can work this out," Pitcher said. "It would be a shame for the kids to miss such an important game. How many of us can boast that they have played in international competition?'

Pitcher pointed out that in June more than 1,400 teams made up of players 16 and under launched their quest for the national championship.

"At the end, Westland won it - that's saying something.

Competing in what has become the world's largest ice skating competition, Belleville's lovely figure skater Victoria Ann Lucas managed to finish second with her freestyle program. More than 6,000 skaters participated in a wide-range of ice skating competitions held Aug. 10-15 in Chicago, II. The 15-year-old Victoria, who is a sophomore at Belleville High School, has been skating since she was 5-years-old - and for the last four years, she's been skating competitively. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Lucas of Belleville, Victoria also picked up a pair of sixth place trophies for her performances in "Comedy Duet" and freestyle footwork.

Lucas represents the Wayne Community Center of Wayne.

Lucas's parents were in the audience to watch their daughter earn national acclaim.

We combined ice skating competition, a vacation and the north of Chicago flooding was thrown in for free," quipped the Lucases. (Chicago was hit with its worst rains and flooding in recent years the second week of August.)

Skaters competed in several programs including Comedy. Spotlight, Precision Teams, Drill Teams and Production Numbers which featured up to 60 skaters on the ice at one time. The youngest skater was a 2-year-old speedracer and the oldest 75

Along with skaters from Michigan, there were competitors from Hawaii, the United Arab Emirates, England, Hong Kong, France, India, Lebanon, Jordan, Korea and Switzerland who also competed in figure, freestyle, hockey and speed racing

Huron gifted gridders may not be enough

By TOM MOORADIAN ANP Staff Writer

Like the Marines, New Boston Huron High head football coach Tom Lebeau has a few tough gridders.

But, in a conference that appears to be loaded this year with experience, Lebeau's few may not be enough.

"We have a small nucleus of veterans," noted Lebeau who is beginning his 11th campaign as Huron's head coach. "But, we also have a lot of holes to fill and, in order to compete in this league, we will have to have some surprises from people we know little about. If that should happen, we will be a very competitive team this season.

The season will begin for the Chiefs at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4 when they host nonconference opponent Dearborn Heights Annapolis. The two rivals have had hard-hitting games the three times they have met.

Five starters off of last year's 3-6 club were in a cadre of 27 who reported for varsity practice the first week. The five are: Jon Tackett, Len Ziegler, Mike Tavtigian, Mike Emery and Tom Waters. Tackett, a senior running back, has the potential to develop into an outstanding ballcarrier if fate doesn't intervene in the form of an injury; Ziegler, a proven tatask of fullback, while Tavtigian and Emery are guards. Waters is a veteran tackle.

Because of the lack of numbers. Lebeau and his staff have been forced to utilize most of their personnel both ways. And that usually takes its toll in touchdowns.

Huron also boasts in its lineup notable letterwinners who saw limited action a year ago, but must become those "surprises" that Lebeau refers to. In that list include Sam Hall and Mark Laurain, both ends, and Scott Staten, a guard. Dave Greggo, who returns at split end, and Mike Valentine, at quarterback, should be improved in their senior year.

But Lebeau is the first to admit finding a replacement for hustling and durable John Umin. last year's QB, is a major job.

Valentine and Paul Hill are being tutored for the position. and only time will tell who will get the starting assignment.

Lebeau moreover believes that the Chiefs' forte this season will be offense and he backs his conclusion on the basis that the entire line and two running backs are back in the fold.

Of those six losses that the Chiefs digested last year, only two were games that Huron "wasn't really in it", according to the Huron coach.
